

SAN MIGUEL DE ALLENDE / PRIVATE GUIDE

Moving to San Miguel

A grounded guide to exploring the city, planning a home search, and arriving with room to settle in.

BLAZE BEASLEY

Explore before you organize everything

Relocating is a series of practical choices and a chance to learn how you want to live.

Get to know the rhythms

Use an exploratory visit to move through neighborhoods at different times of day. Notice walkability, street activity, services, hills, outdoor space, and how each area feels in the routines you imagine having.

Plan a focused home search

Write a brief for your advisor: target use of the home, timing, location preferences, accessibility needs, visitors, pets, workspace, and any features you do not want to compromise on. A clear brief helps tours stay useful.

Leave room for discovery

A neighborhood that looks right online can feel different in person. Give yourself enough space to compare settings, revisit favorites, and decide what you need to learn before you make a commitment.

A RELOCATION VISIT CHECKLIST

Walk a few candidate areas at morning, afternoon, and evening.

Test the routes and errands that matter to your routine.

Keep short notes after every tour and neighborhood walk.

Identify the local professionals you may need to consult.

Prepare, arrive, settle

Thoughtful preparation lets the first weeks feel more manageable.

Make a practical plan

Decide what you will bring, store, or replace; how you will handle documents; and what needs to be in place for your first days. Confirm requirements directly with the relevant providers or qualified professionals instead of relying on general checklists.

Treat specialist topics as specialist topics

Residency, immigration, healthcare, banking, tax, legal, notarial, insurance, and financing questions are personal and can change. This guide is not advice on those subjects. Consult qualified local professionals and the relevant institutions for current guidance tailored to you.

Start small after arrival

Give yourself time to establish daily routines: the routes you use, the services you prefer, and the people you will rely on. A first-week list can be simple - home essentials, local contacts, and a few places that make the city feel familiar.

FIRST WEEKS, AT YOUR PACE

Keep key documents and professional contacts organized.

Confirm any local arrangements directly with their providers.

Learn your immediate neighborhood on foot.

Schedule a private conversation when you are ready to refine your home search.

A private conversation, at your pace.

Blaze Beasley offers personal guidance for buyers and sellers exploring San Miguel de Allende. Begin with the questions that matter to you; there is no pressure to have every answer yet.

Start a private consultation at withbeasley.com

beasleymotion@gmail.com | +1 (210) 915-7177