Preparing Your Home

Buyers relocating from abroad are shopping mostly through photos and video before they ever board a flight — which makes preparation the highest-leverage step in the entire selling process.

- Declutter and depersonalize — even temporarily — so buyers can picture their own life in the space
- Fix the small, visible things: a sticking gate latch, a chipped stair tile, a burnt-out fixture
- Open every curtain and shutter — colonial homes are built around courtyards specifically to bring in light
- Address any deferred maintenance on roofing, plumbing, or structural elements before, not after, a buyer's inspection

“The goal isn't a perfect house. It's a house a buyer can say yes to without hesitation.”

Pricing Correctly

Pricing a touch high “to leave room to negotiate” is one of the most common — and most costly — mistakes sellers make in this market.

WHY OVERPRICING BACKFIRES

Overpriced listings sit on the market longer, buyers start to assume something is wrong, and sellers often end up settling for less than an accurate opening price would have captured.

A proper valuation weighs recent comparable closings — not asking prices — alongside your home’s specific condition, location, and any features that set it apart. That’s the number worth starting from.

Professional Photography

In a market this dependent on out-of-town buyers doing their first pass online, photography isn't a cosmetic extra — it's a large part of what actually gets a showing scheduled.

- Shoot in the late afternoon, when San Miguel's light is at its warmest
- Feature the courtyard prominently — it's usually the emotional center of a colonial home
- Include a few wide establishing shots of the street and neighborhood, not just interior rooms
- Consider a short video walkthrough in addition to stills for serious inquiries

Marketing Strategy

An effective listing strategy reaches serious buyers where they're already looking — not just the local market, but the international audience most likely to pay a premium for the right property.

- Professional photography and, where appropriate, a video walkthrough as the foundation of every listing
- Targeted promotion to the international buyer audience actively searching San Miguel
- Clear, honest listing copy that leads with the property's real strengths
- A dedicated showing process that respects both the seller's privacy and the buyer's time

Negotiation

Calm, well-informed negotiation protects a seller's bottom line far more than a rigid opening number ever does.

The strongest position in any negotiation is data: knowing what's actually closed nearby, understanding a buyer's real motivation, and being willing to walk away from a lowball offer with confidence rather than urgency.

GOOD TO KNOW

A well-priced home that's shown well typically draws multiple interested parties within the first few weeks — that's the scenario that puts a seller in control of terms, not just price.

Closing Timeline

A typical San Miguel closing moves through a predictable sequence once an offer is accepted.

Week 1	Offer accepted, promissory agreement signed, deposit collected
Weeks 2–5	Due diligence, title search, buyer's trust or corporation setup if needed
Weeks 6–9	Final documentation prepared by the notario público
Weeks 9–11	Closing signature, funds transfer, and title recording

Cash buyers using an existing trust structure can close meaningfully faster than this range; financed or first-time foreign buyers should plan for the fuller timeline.

Taxes

Sellers should be aware of potential capital gains tax (ISR) on the sale, though several exemptions and deductions can meaningfully reduce or eliminate it — particularly for a primary residence held for several years.

TALK TO A PROFESSIONAL EARLY

Capital gains calculations depend on original purchase documentation, improvements made, and residency status — this is worth reviewing with a Mexican accountant well before listing, not at closing.

Moving Checklist

- Gather original purchase deed, trust documents, and any permit or renovation paperwork
- Settle outstanding utility accounts and HOA dues ahead of closing
- Arrange for keys, gate remotes, and any manuals to be ready for handover
- Confirm forwarding arrangements for mail and any recurring local services
- Plan the practical move itself — shipping, storage, or donation of anything not going with you
